

Woolworths 2006 Overall IT Supplier of the Year Award

Award: 2006 IT Supplier of the Year (Services)

On November 15th, Intermec ANZ was awarded the 2006 IT Supplier of the Year by Woolworths in the category of Services. This award recognises the great work done by Intermec and LogicaCMG at Woolworths distribution centres over the past 5 years, for the supply, installation and post sales maintenance support of Intermec equipment.

Woolworths, a major Australian retailer, is a major IT investor in the Asia Pacific region. It has been a leader when it comes to the implementation and execution of leading edge technology. The award acknowledges the long-standing relationship between Woolworths and Intermec.

Our excellent partnership with LogicaCMG has been a contributing factor to our success at Woolworths. They are a committed Intermec partner and have a great team with strong skill sets.

Award: 2006 Overall IT Supplier of the Year

Intermec was also awarded, for the first time, Woolworths' OVERALL IT Supplier of the Year at their National Supplier of the Year function on the 15th December.

Intermec emerged the winner despite being up against other award-winning IT suppliers, including Sun, i2, WebMethods, Wedderburn Scales, IBM, Accenture, Telstra and many others. (Our traditional ADC competitors were not even nominated!) This highest accolade from Woolworths recognized Intermec's contribution to the success of Project Mercury, a $600 million supply chain redevelopment project. It also commended the excellence of our products and the on-going support services we provide.

Steven Bradley, Woolworths' Chief Logistics and Information Officer, recognized Intermec as a valued partner and a critical component of their mission critical infrastructure in their regional and national Distribution Centres.
